THE PRESIDENT'S GREAT WORK.

The Federal Board of Arbitration and Conciliation had utterly failed to adjust the differences between the railroads and the railroad employees when they passed the matter up to President Wilson. He has been working on the problem for two days and already there is a rift in the clouds that gives promise of widening until the sunshine of peace shall be shining. Speaking of the greatness of the achievement, should the President succeed, the Houston Post says:

"It was a critical situation a day or two ago when the President stepped in, and it may prove ultimately that his efforts are fruitless. But if he has found a way to bring the contending forces together upon a common ground of peaceful arbitration, and this is what the country will hope and pray, the service will be almost beyond the comprehension or calculation of finite minds.

"In our intense modern life, with a large population inhabiting a wide area, and the division of labor existing upon a scale never known before in the world of industry, transportation is an element so vital to the country's well-being that its interruption for one day would be a disaster. To stop all movement of traffic for any considerable length of time or to shrow the machinery out of gear indefinitely would inflict besides the material loss a catastrophe of a physical nature so acute and so far-reaching that the mind could scarcely conceive it.

A stoppage of transportation for ten days would entail upon the country a financial loss far in excess of the $500,000,000 which the Federal Congress in the development of its preparedness program has appropriated in excess of former years. The interruption of a month or longer, together with the human suffering entailed, the social order disturbed, and the paralysis of industry, production, trade and commerce, internal and international, would simply be as disastrous as war itself.

If the President has averted that sort of thing, and let us hope he has, it seems to the Post that the high water mark of human achievement in a time of peace will have to be registered to his credit.

If this has happened, the President has rendered a service in which every man, woman and child of the country—not every domestic animal—will share in a most vital way.

If this has been done, it is bigger and better than the Federal Reserve act, bigger than rural credits, bigger than the Underwood tariff, bigger than any distinctive achievement of the administration save keeping out of the European war.

Whether the President be re-elected or not, if to his other achievements of admitted benefit, the preservation of peace between the railroads and their employees can be added, history will so enshrine his name that time will never be able to erase his fame.

Whatever the weaknesses and irritations of his tenure may be, it will be hard to contemplate them angrily if in the closing months of his term he shall be able to say that he succeeded in saving the country the horrors of the threatened tieup of the country's railway systems.

The lack of water pressure at the fire last night was a matter of common regret for all, more especially so because of the feeling of uncertainty created, as the trouble has not yet been located. The superintendent of the power plant informed The Eagle today that the fault was not at the plant, as they had two pumps going all the time, and that a third was added, but it did not add to the pressure. His theory is that some where between the plant and the fire a main was stopped up, which held the water in check. Members of the fire department share in this opinion, yet they are unable to account for it, as when the Petty home burned two weeks ago, they coupled the hose to the same plug and had a fine pressure. It is evident, however, there is an obstruction somewhere, for with open mains and the pumps going results would have been certain. The Eagle learned today an investigation would be held by the city council to determine the difficulty, which is commendable and should be done at once. At present there is a feeling of uncertainty in the minds of the people which should be dispelled. They are apprehensive lest another catastrophe overtake them and the fire boys would be helpless.

President Wilson's campaign manager has announced the President will not make a "swing around the circle" on a campaign speaking tour. The President says such a plan is not compatible with the dignity of the office. The Eagle thinks too, and believes his lofty and dignified view will draw more people to him than would be won by a speaking tour. Candidate Hughes is making a regular "mess" of his tour.

The old block house answering for a High school building in Bryan, is still there. When our present High School building was erected, the science of architecture had not made its advent into this country. It was built on the four-wall plan—put up the four outside walls and then make as many rooms as needed with interior partitions. The science of lighting, heating, ventilation, acoustics, etc., were unheard of. Shall our children have to endure this primitive structure always?

We suppose when a lady candidate for office in the future comes to make out her statement of campaign expenses she will itemize: "Hat for Houston speech, $10; trimming for making over for Galveston rally, $3.75," etc.—George Bailey in Houston Post.

Wheat is still jumping. It went up eight cents a bushel Tuesday on reports of crop damage. If it goes much higher a loaf of bread will be about the size of an Ingersol watch, and a biscuit the size of a bullet.

Four Texas congressmen voted against the enlarged navy construction program placed in the navy appropriation bill by the senate. These were Black, Dies, Hardy and Slayden. Those voting for it were, Buchanan, Davis, Eagle, McLeMore, Rayburn, Smith, Stephens and Young. Absent, Garner, Gregg, Henry, Sumner, Callaway and Burgess.

The differences between the railroad magnates and the railroad employees, may be settled, without a strike after all. President Wilson is doing his best. If he succeeds, Candidate Hughes will no doubt have some criticism and say if "the proper course" had been pursued, there would have been no differences.

Candidate Hughes in his speeches indulges only in petty criticisms. Why does he not offer some great constructive program that will make for "the general welfare?"

Candidate Hughes says "If the right thing had been done, the Lusitania disaster would have been avoided. When asked what he would have done, he was not prepared to say. It is easy to criticize, but to give an intelligent people an intelligent course that should have been pursued, is a different matter altogether.

TRADE EXCURSION TRIP POSTPONED

Heavy Rains Over Territory to Be Covered Made Automobile Travel Impossible—Will Make Trip 22.

Owing to the heavy rains yesterday which visited the territory the trade boosters for Bryan had mapped out to cover today, the trip had to be postponed. However it is the purpose of Secretary McElroy to make the trip before the first trades day which will be the first Monday in September. In conversation this morning the Commercial secretary said, "We must now double our plans for the trip on the 22nd, which is next Tuesday, it will not do to let this thing fall down, we have sent out some advertising and the people are
